INNOVATION & KNOWLEDGE HUB

Banking & Finance

Over the past 200 years, Geneva's financial sector, most famously its private banks, has built a reputation for reliability and confidentiality. Today, Geneva's financial sector includes 140 banks, of which 62 are foreign-owned. Geneva is the birth-place and capital of international asset management. The Geneva financial centre has become a bench-mark of excellence for other financial centres and is a key centre with regard to private transnational asset management.

Biotech & Medtech

Science magazine has called the Lake Geneva Region the "Number One cluster for life sciences research in continental Europe". The biotech and medtech sectors in BioAlps are experiencing double-digit annual growth. Geneva's competence in pharmaceuticals, chemistry, biotechnology, microtechnology, precision instruments and medical devices continues to attract multinational healthcare and life science congresses.

Commodities trading & Trade finance

One of Geneva's leading sector is trading and trade finance. With 400 companies that now handle the majority of global transactions, Geneva is a world leader in trade in oil, sugar, coffee, grains, rice and oilseeds.

Microtechnologies

Ironically, Switzerland can thank one of its traditional industries – watchmaking – for helping it to move ahead in one of today's hottest sciences: nano- and microtechnology.
The technical know-how involved in the precise measurements and materials science needed for making watch movements gave the Swiss a head-start that they have simply taken to an infinitely smaller level.

Information & Communication technologies

Geneva has become a hub in IT expertise, with over 1,000 companies engaged in researching, developing and marketing advanced new products in software, electronics, logistics, semi-conductors, tele-communication, Internet, computers and peripherals. It hosts the European Organisation for Nuclear Research (CERN) as well as international standard-setting organisations such as the International Telecommunications Union (ITU) and the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC).

Cleantech

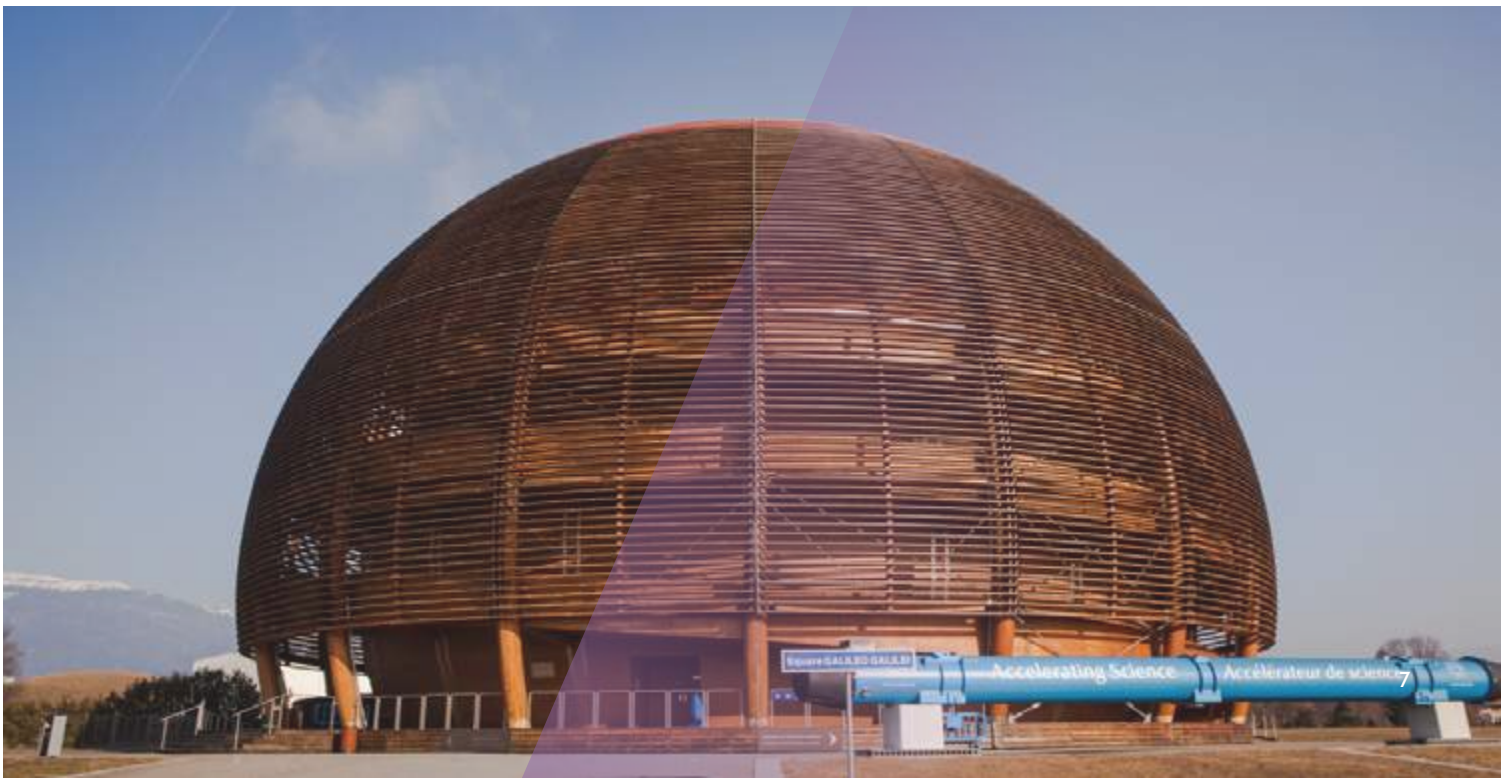
Geneva is a hub of research, lobbying and planning concerning the environment and sustainability-related issues. In addition to top research universities and labs, key players and innovative companies, international organisations, NGOs and innovation/ trade actors such as the UNEP, the WIPO, the WMO, the WTO, the IETA, and the WBCSD all have headquarters or major offices in Geneva.

Flavours & Fragrances

Two of the world's three top flavour and fragrance companies are established in Geneva. Firmenich was founded here in 1895 and has been a family-owned company ever since. Givaudan moved to Geneva in 1898 from its birthplace in Zurich. Together they cover approximately 40 % of world market share.

Watchmaking & Luxury goods

Geneva's image – elegance, prestige and excellence – reinforces the brands of luxury goods and services based in Geneva. In turn, these luxury companies contribute to the Geneva's renown. They represent the essence of the luxury industry; exceptional expertise is at the core of their brands.



International organisations & NGOs

Ever since the League of Nations was established here in 1920, Geneva has had a reputation as THE international city. But even those well aware of this role are astounded by the number and diversity of the agencies, organisations and NGOs based here: no less than 168 nations (169 if you include Switzerland) are represented in Geneva by a permanent mission or representation.

Two thirds of the United Nations' activities take place in Geneva, which therefore has the largest concentration of UN personnel in the world. Presently, Geneva hosts the world head-quarters for the World Trade Organisation (WTO), International Telecommunications Union (ITU), World Intellectual Property Organisation (WIPO), International Organisation for Standardization (ISO), International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), World Health Organisation (WHO), International Labour Organisation (ILO), World Meteorological Organisation (WMO) and Inter-national Air Transport Association (IATA), to name but a few. All of the UN's major fields of work –health, labour issues, intellectual property standards, human rights, humanitarian action and disaster relief, economic, trade and development activities, disarmament, science and technology, as well as research and training – are carried out in Geneva.

Headquarters & Coordination centres

Switzerland is one of the preferred locations for European companies choosing to relocate their global headquarters.

Over 140 multinational companies already have a headquarters or coordination center in Geneva.
These companies range from international banks, to world famous high-tech and biotech companies and the world's leading trading companies. Among their reasons for choosing Geneva, the CEOs of these companies list its central location in Europe and proximity to Africa and the Middle East, its exceptional quality of life, efficient infrastructure, highly educated and multilingual workforce, and stable and secure environment.

World-class companies come to Geneva because it offers them the world-class conditions and benefits they need to develop their businesses successfully.

3 / DOMAINE DU CHÂTEAU DE COLLEX

In the middle of Geneva's countryside, overlooking the majesty of the Jura and Mont Blanc, sit in a world where you'll feel like going back in time. The Domaine was built in 1730. Many noble families owned the area until 1936 when the Probst family acquired the whole area. The Domaine has 13 acres of vineyards composed by 10 different types of grape. Grape harvest is handly made and wines are produced and bottled in our own domaine.

4 / CHÂTEAU DES BOIS

The Château des Bois is a magnificent private estate, built in 1631 extending over 115 hectares. An ideal venue to host special celebrations (no limited curfew) or corporate events. The Orangerie opens onto a garden and the Grande Salle with its majestic fireplace is equipped with a high-tech multimedia system. Our guests enjoy a wine tasting in the vaulted cellar or a walk to meet our Galloways.
